Victoria

University of Melbourne Act 2009[†]

No. 78 of 2009

[Assented to 1 December 2009]

Preamble

The University of Melbourne was created by the Parliament of the fledgling Colony of Victoria as one of several demonstrations of pride, confidence and aspiration for its future.

The preamble to the University Act, 16 Victoria, Act No. 34 declared "...it is expedient to promote sound learning in the Colony of Victoria and with that intent to establish incorporate and endow an University at Melbourne open to all classes and denominations of Her Majesty's subjects...".

The University came into being on 11 April 1853.

The Act set in motion the appointment of a Council to manage its staff, affairs and property and enabled the matriculation of students to study for admission to degrees in Arts, Medicine, Law and Music, and the affiliation of colleges and licensing of other establishment as student residences.

The University was endowed with an annual grant from the Treasury.

The administration of any religious test in connection with the obtaining of any "advantage or privilege" of the University was expressly debarred. The University's degree granting powers were subsequently extended to encompass all disciplines, except divinity.

On 14 March 1859 Queen Victoria granted Letters Patent that the University's degrees in the fields of Arts, Medicine, Law and Music "shall be recognised as Academic distinctions and rewards of Merit and be entitled to rank precedence and consideration in Our United Kingdom and in Our Colonies and possessions and throughout the world as fully as if the said degrees had been granted by any University of Our said United Kingdom".

In 1881 The University of Melbourne was the first university in Australia and one of the first in the world to admit women. The first woman to graduate from the University did so in December 1883.

Subsequently the University and its colleges were enriched by the gifts of many civic-minded Victorians, it forged enduring links with the city's growing cultural and professional institutions. The first anatomy lessons in the southern hemisphere were one of many significant contributions it made to education in the broader region.

In the post Second World War period, it became a much larger institution drawing not only more broadly from across the Victorian population but from across Australia and with a significant proportion of international students.

It mentored the undergraduate school of the Australian National University.

The University granted the first Australian Doctorates of Philosophy in 1948.

Graduates and former students of the University have contributed to inquiry, knowledge, understanding and achievement in many fields and have thereby enriched Victoria, Australia and the world.

The University of Melbourne is a public-spirited institution with a mission that encompasses learning and teaching, research and knowledge transfer, all of which exist for public benefit.

To enable The University of Melbourne to continue and expand its mission, it is expedient to re-enact the law relating to The University of Melbourne in a more modern form.

The Parliament of Victoria therefore enacts:
